WHITTAKER

When Conductor Dugan went through the car he unfortunately failed to recognize the governor of Kentucky.

"He" called the conductor.

The error pulled out his ticket.

"My mind," said the conductor, punching the ticket as he spoke, "I shall be compelled to trouble you to remove your feet from that seat."

The governor paid no attention but the conductor, thinking it was just a temporary fit of stubbornness, passed on. Fifteen minutes later he came back through the coach to find "the feet" still there.

As to what followed there are, of course, two sides. The conductor, when called upon by the "Times," stated that he did not think it was proper for him to discuss it. His friends claim, however, that he pulled out the foot rest and offered to pull the passenger more comfortable, as upon continued refusal to remove it from the chair the conductor gently put them down.

Governor Bradley's side of the story was given to the road in a telegram sent from Central City, immediately upon his arrival.

He claimed that Conductor Dugan had been discourteous and abusive.

At all events, Dugan received no caution the next night that his services were no longer needed by the road. His friends say their effort to have him reinstated will prove successful, as he has heretofore been employed by the road as a most faithful and courteous employee. They said that when he is given a chance to explain he will satisfy the road that he intended no discourtesy to the governor.

Justice Winchester, who is one of the pioneers of Paducah, says that he can remember when the locality now occupied by the Langstaff-Orme mill was a dense forest, habited by birds and beasts, and one of the best places imaginable to hunt turkeys. One day two gentlemen from a distant city came down to engage in a little sports, and repaired to the forested locality. One had an old bamboo turkey call, and encircling himself among some tall reeds began to toot a solo, while his partner patiently awaited the appearance of some luck-less gobbler. It chanced that an other bird was also out after the same kind of game, and hearing the decoy notes proceeding from the umbrageous interior crept up and drew a bead on the back of the unsuspecting hunter mistaking it for a turkey. He didn't do much—just perforated the poor fellow's pate with turkey shot.

He was very profuse in his apologies when he discovered the damage he had done, but had a hard time appeasing the wrath of the fellow whom he hit, the latter thinking that insult was added to injury in thinking he resembled a turkey.
